REPORT.

Thirty-three years have elapsed since the establishment of the Public School System in the City and County of Philadelphia, and at the end of this first third of a century, the Controllers can bear their testimony to its sound and healthful condition, and to its satisfactory progress towards a higher state of excellence. The destruction of one of the largest Grammar Schools* in the disastrous fire which occurred on the 9th day of July, 1850, and the laying of the corner stone of the new edifice about to be erected on the same site, a little more than eleven years after the opening of that School,† naturally draws attention to a comparative view of some features in our Common School system, as they were presented in 1839, and as exhibited at the close of the late school year.

At the former period, the radical improvements introduced by the Act of 1836, in rendering our Schools essentially public by opening them to the whole community; in the abolition of the obligatory exclusive use of the Lancasterian system; and in the establishment of a Central High School; had but begun to make themselves felt, and there were then but indications of the rapid growth which so soon developed itself. There existed, at the time we refer to, about 16 School-houses, the property of the public; about 189 Teachers, of all grades, and less than 19,000 scholars on the rolls. In the School-year, 1850-51, the number of School-houses erected with the public funds, had increased to 60—of Teachers 781, and including those engaged in the Night Schools, to 928—and of scholars, to more than 48,000. The proportion of Teachers to Pupils, was then as 1 to the 100; now it stands as 1 to about 61. While, too, the expenditures for Public School purposes, did not, at this former period, exceed $190,000, of which more than one-fifth was supplied from the Treasury of the State, during our late school year there was expended (as judiciously as at any prior era) the large sum of over $366,000, of which but about one-eleventh part came from the funds of the Commonwealth, and the residue was supplied by County taxation.

The rapid increase of population in the City and County of Philadelphia during the last ten years, which was apparent to even a casual observer, and which the returns of the late census fully established, had excited enquiry among some, with reference to the increase of public scholars; and a doubt whether this latter item bore a proportionate relation to the other. When it was known, that so large a portion of the increase of our people was attributable to immigration, it was not without some anxiety on the part of friends of our common school system, that a comparison on this point was instituted between the returns for the years 1840 and 1850. It was particularly gratifying to discover, after such an examination, that the increase of scholars had more than kept pace with the growth of population in our City and County. In 1839-40, the population was 258,000, and the number of scholars, 18,800, or about one-thirteenth of the whole. In 1850-51, the population reached 410,000, and the pupils numbered 48,000, or more than one-ninth of the entire community—showing thus, not only a largely increased demand for common school instruction on the part of citizens and residents, but also the further fact, that the guardians of this department of the public welfare had fulfilled their duty in affording adequate accommodations to meet this unusual demand. The healthy condition of the Schools of every grade, has undoubtedly conduced in a great measure, to the full supply of pupils.

The accompanying documents will exhibit, in obedience to the requirement of the Act of Assembly of 1818, the amount of expenditure by this Board, and the number of children educated in the Public Schools, for the school year commencing July 1, 1850, and terminating June 30th, 1851. The exact total expenditure was $366,361 62, of which sum, $24,473 54, having been expended in the building of new school houses, and $20,617 97 in repairs and additions to existing buildings, the balance, of $321,270 11, remaining after deducting these two items, may be considered as indicating the current expenses of the schools for the year; although perhaps a portion of the cost for school furniture and furnaces, might be appropriately excluded also from this latter amount. The large sum of $42,169 11 was expended in books and stationery for the use of the scholars.

The number of male pupils on the register, was 24,508, of females, 23,548, total, 48,056. These were in attendance at 270 Schools; viz—1 High School, 1 Normal School, 53 Grammar Schools, 34 Secondary Schools, 142 Primary Schools, and 39 Unclassified Schools. They were under the care of 781 Teachers, of whom, 82 were Male, and 699 Female Teachers. The direction of the Schools is committed by law to 228 Directors and 24 Controllers, each of the eleven sections, into which the First School District, (comprising the City and County of Philadelphia,) is divided, being governed by its separate board of School Directors, and all being under the general supervision of the Board of Controllers.

Considerable attention has been directed to the construction of School houses, with respect as well to their form, as to their proper warming and ventilation. Instead of the two or three large rooms, with small class rooms adjoining, a preference is now given to rooms on the same floor of equal size, and separated by moveable glazed partitions, so as to allow, at will, the whole space to be thrown into one apartment. By this means, the injurious effects of crowded class-rooms has been avoided, and at the same time, the advantage of one large room for the occasional assemblage of the entire school, has been secured.

The following new school houses have been commenced and partly erected, during the last year, viz:—

The Night Schools for Adults may now be considered as incorporated into our System. While much good is effected, through their instrumentality, to numerous individuals, we trust that their supposed happy influence upon the order of a densely populated community, has not been over estimated.

An addition has been made of $25, to the annual salaries of many of the Assistants in the Primary and Secondary Schools.

This increase of compensation was required and well deserved by that meritorious class of Teachers, and was most welcome to them.

In the appendix will be found, as usual, the Reports from the Principals of the High and Normal Schools. In regard to the former, no particular remark appears now to be necessary, the School continuing under its former admirable management, and being filled to its entire capacity, with nearly 500 well behaved and improving pupils. The power of conferring Academical degrees in the Arts, which was entrusted to this Board by an Act of the Legislature of the Commonwealth, passed on the 9th of April 1849, seems to have been called into exercise, with much discretion on the part of the Principal of the School.

The successful progress of the Normal School is shown in the rapidly increasing demand for its pupils to fill the situation of Teachers. This demand is frequently made even before they have completed the full term of study, and sensibly diminishes the numbers of the graduating classes. Attention is asked to the suggestion of the intelligent Principle, inviting the local Directors to appoint Committees to assist at the examinations and unite in the Certificates given to the graduating pupils, thereby qualifying them at once for election to the post of assistants in the Grammar Schools. A beneficial change was introduced by this Board, early in the last school year, advancing the minimum of age required for admission to the Normal School, to 15. Perhaps a still further advance may be found profitable in bringing the School to its proper professional department of training Teachers; and may remove any mistaken impression of an antagonistic relation on its part to the Grammar Schools of the District.

The number of pupils on the Roll of the Normal School, was 150, and their average age, about 16.

The fulfilment of their responsible duties by the Principals and assistant Teachers of all the various schools under the care of the Board, justly entitles them to public confidence and support. It should be added, that the vast benefits which unquestionably are derived by the whole community from a Public School System, in its inculcation of decency and order, and in its efforts to overcome the ignorance which disqualifies its possessor, male or female, for the discharge of the offices of life in our day and country, may well reconcile even the most cautious among us, to the large outlay of money required in its support.

Constituted as our frame of government is, and must continue to be, so long as the true republican principle animates it, the education of every citizen, nay, of every resident among us, becomes of vital importance to its purity and its preservation. We are aware of no plan of public instruction, which is consistent with the conscientious maintenance of religious liberty, and which at the same time, in its essential features differs from that established here. The equality of all citizens before the law, comprehends the rights of conscience, as well as those of personal security and private property, and while the former are guarantied, as they certainly are, under our Common School Statutes, we think that the system, in its administration, is not justly chargeable with any encouragement to the enemies of morality and religion; but, on the contrary, assists and animates their friends.

By order of the Board,

G. M. WHARTON, President.

Attested,

R. J. HEMPHILL, Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT

PRINCIPAL OF THE HIGH SCHOOL,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING

July 18, 1851.

REPORT.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL,
Philadelphia, September 8, 1851.

To N. Nathans, William J. Reed, George M. Wharton, Harlan Ingram, and T. K. Collins, Esquires, Committee on the High School.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg leave to present the following Report of the Central High School, for the year ending July 18, 1851, comprehending the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth terms, and the thirteenth year in the history of the school. The last annual report entered so fully into the general character and condition of the school, that it will not be necessary at present to do more than to record the ordinary historical statistics, and such few slight changes as may have occurred during the year.

The number of admissions during the year has been 223. The number who have left, by graduation or otherwise, is 206. The number belonging to the school during the twenty-fifth term was 485; during the twenty-sixth term, 476. The slight falling off in numbers, which this report presents, is due to the large increase in the studies required for admission, which was made in the year previous. At the first two examinations after this increase of studies, it was found difficult to fill the school without admitting at an average much lower than we have heretofore considered discreet. The Grammar schools, however, are beginning already to rally from the weight thus imposed upon them, and at the recent examination we had no difficulty in admitting students enough to bring the school up to its usual standard. The number in attendance at the present time is 502. We shall be able for some years to come to maintain the school at this point, any undue pressure of applicants being prevented by increasing gradually the average for admission, and by widening the range of study in the departments of Mensuration and Algebra in the Grammar Schools.

In March, 1851, Mr. Heyer, who had filled the office of Assistant in the school with great acceptance for a period of five years, resigned the same to the regret equally of the students and of his associates. His place was filled by the promotion of the junior assistant, Mr. Howard, and the place of the latter was filled by the appointment of Mr. Samuel S. Fisher, one of the recent graduates of the school.

Among the changes of the year that may be mentioned with special satisfaction is the enlargement of the department of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy. By a resolution of the Controllers, dated May 13, 1851, the whole time of Professor Boyé was engaged for the institution, and his department placed on the same footing as those of the other Professors.

The vacant lot adjoining the High School, occupied by us for so many years as a "Play Ground," having changed owners during the year, we have been obliged to relinquish the same, and thus have been left without any adequate place in which the students might take exercise during recess. In consequence of this, the Committee, by resolution of March 7, 1851, directed that in preparing a new order of exercises, the long recesses should be omitted, and the school close three-quarters of an hour before the usual time, that is, at two and a quarter P. M., daily.

From the re-organization of the school in 1840, until the establishment of the Saturday Classes in 1844, the Professors held a Faculty Meeting every Saturday morning, for the purpose of consultation and discipline. The establishment of the Saturday

Classes for Teachers interfered with this arrangement, and the regular weekly meetings of the Professors were abandoned, for several years. During this period, however, there were constant consultations, more or less formal, and special meetings were called whenever circumstances required. On the 9th of April, 1851, at the recommendation of the High School Committee, the weekly meetings on Saturday mornings were resumed, and the Saturday Classes, which had been gradually dwindling away, were entirely discontinued. The meetings of the Faculty since that time have been attended with great punctuality, and the general interests of the school have been promoted by their consultations and decisions. All cases of discipline and miscellaneous business, capable of delay, being postponed till Saturday, the business of instruction throughout the week is subject to fewer interruptions than formerly. The discipline of the school, also, being reserved for a particular day, can be administered with more care, and a much better effect, than when attended to in the haste and distraction of other and widely different occupations.

Our former furnaces being worn out, the Controllers, at their meeting in July, 1851, ordered the introduction of a heating and ventilating apparatus, on a plan proposed by Mr. Gardner Chilson, and adopted by the Committee on Property. This apparatus is now nearly completed. I entertain the confident belief that, when it is finished, the building will be rendered much more comfortable, both in summer and winter, than it has heretofore been, and that the health both of the students and the professors will be much promoted by it.

The tables which follow (Appendices A.—M.,) contain all the particulars relative to the several examinations for admission, the semi-annual examinations and commencements of the school, the course of studies, the order of exercises, and the other matters necessary to complete the history of the school during the year. The explanation of these tables was given with so much fulness in the last annual report, that it is not deemed necessary to say anything further on the subject at present.

I will only add, in conclusion, that during the nine years that I have been connected with the school, it was never apparently in a more prosperous and healthy condition than at this present time. I have never known the students more generally animated with a love of study, nor the Professors more zealous in their several departments, or more harmonious in their relations with each other.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN S. HART,
Principal.

EXPLANATION OF THE TABLES.

THE course of study in the High School extends through four years. A new class is formed every six months. Consequently there are eight Classes, or Divisions, designated by the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H. Division A is the highest class, and H the lowest. Many of the students do not remain through the whole course. Hence the upper classes are so small that in some studies the whole class can recite to one Professor during the same hour; while the lower classes in nearly all the departments have to be divided into sections, one Professor not being able to hear more than one-half, or one-third of a class in an hour. These sections are indicated thus, H<sup>1</sup>, H<sup>2</sup>, H<sup>3</sup>. During the hour devoted to instruction in Languages, the classes are divided according to choice. A part, choosing the study of French and Spanish, go that hour to the Professor of Modern Languages. Another part, choosing the study of Latin and Greek, go to the Professor of Ancient Languages. Still another part, constituting about one-third, consist of those who expect to leave at or before the end of two years. These spend the hour, occupied by the rest of the class in the study of the Languages, in attending to some of the more advanced English studies of the third and fourth years. This mode of dividing a class, which occurs only during the hour devoted to the Languages, is indicated by the words Principal, Classical, and English. H pr, H cl, H eng., mean severally, H Principal, H Classical, and H English, that is, the students of Division H, pursuing these several courses. In some cases a Professor is marked in the Order of Exercises as having charge of two classes the same hour. If the letters indicating the classes are placed side by side, it means that both classes are to recite. If the letters are placed one above the other, and separated by a small line, the class above the line is to recite, the class below to study. The class that is to study is further indicated by the letters st. The letter L below any class, denotes that they have a Lecture that hour; Prep. stands for Preparation, and denotes that the hour is occupied by the Professor in preparing experiments for a Lecture. The hours of attendance marked on the Order of Exercises, are from nine to quarter after two. This period is divided into seven portions, of three quarters of an hour each. At the end of each three quarters of an hour, the classes all change, going from one recitation room to another, the Professors remaining stationary, and the several classes coming to them successively to recite. The lessons are prepared chiefly out of school, the hours at school being occupied mostly in recitation, attending to lectures, and other exercises. In addition to the six hours indicated on the Order of Exercises, all the classes spend daily a quarter of an hour before nine o'clock in attending to the reading of the Scriptures.

GRADUATING CLASSES.

At the close of the terms ending in February and July, certificates were granted to those pupils, who were considered qualified to discharge properly the duties of Teachers in the Public Schools.

The numbers of the graduating classes are greatly diminished, by the facility with which our pupils obtain situations as teachers, even before having completed the prescribed course of study of the school. They attend the examinations upon the same footing as others, so far as regards tests of mere scholarship; but from the greater opportunities which they enjoy, it is reasonable to suppose they would appear more intelligent. Their thoroughness in the branches which they are required to teach, together with the evidence they give of their knowledge of the most approved methods of instruction, combined with their experience in teaching, gives to them a preference which secures their appointment.

OBJECTS OF THE SCHOOL.

The proposed object in the establishment of the Normal School was to educate teachers. That this has been efficiently and successfully carried out, is fully evidenced by the large number of the pupils now engaged as acceptable teachers;—in most cases exhibiting extraordinary tact in teaching, as well as in the discipline and management of classes; and by the influence of their example as right-minded and thoroughly qualified educators, contributing to introduce into our schools the best methods of teaching, and elevating the standard of the teachers' attainments.

Notwithstanding the many serious obstacles, which this institution in common with all others, whose object contemplates innovation, has had to encounter, its most sanguine advocates have more than realized their expectations, in the results of its operations; while among those who at first entertained doubts as to the necessity or utility of a school for the special training of teachers, are now found its warmest and most devoted friends. Indeed all who carefully examine the subject, seem to adopt the opinion, that the most efficacious and economical plan for educating the children of a community, is first to afford the means for properly qualifying teachers; training them not merely in a knowledge of the branches they are required to teach, but also in the most approved methods of communicating what they know, with opportunities for sufficient practice, under the direction of experienced teachers.

The objects of the Normal School have been much promoted by the increased age required of candidates for admission. By the addition of a year's study in the Grammar Schools before entering the Normal School, the education of the pupils is more nearly completed, and the course of instruction in the latter can be more strictly confined to a review of the branches taught in the former in reference to teaching them; combined with practice in teaching and instruction in such departments of learning, as are embraced in a liberal and thorough education. I trust that the period is not far distant, when a still further increase of age will be justifiable, and higher attainments demanded for admission; until the Normal School, being left to act in its legitimate sphere of imparting to its pupils a knowledge of the art of teaching and indoctrinating them in the principles of the science of teaching and government, will furnish our schools with such teachers, as are worthy of the noble and liberal system of Public Education, of which it constitutes a part.

The proposed design of the Normal School is to furnish that peculiar training which teachers require, and which the Grammar Schools cannot give without interfering with the interests of those who do not intend to become teachers. If therefore, pupils were admitted at an age, and with sufficient attainments to confine the business of the school to this object, the necessity of its existence as a constituent of the Public School System would be apparent to all; and the attempt at competition by other schools would never be made. The Normal training being thus limited, would be more professional in its character; and instead of the idea being entertained; as I fear it is by some, that the school stands in an antagonistical relation to other schools, it would be acknowledged to be a most powerful auxiliary to them.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

The plan of instruction and arrangement of studies remain essentially the same, as described at some length in my last annual report, to which I respectfully refer you; the successful working of the school requiring no change since the full development of its organization. The first part of the course occupying one or two terms, according to the ability of the pupils, is chiefly appropriated to confirming, methodizing and extending their acquirements; during the second part, embracing the remainder of the course, to becoming theoretically and practically acquainted with the art of teaching and school government. The length of time occupied in the course of instruction depends upon such circumstances as the attainments of the pupil at the time of her admission, her capacity to learn, and her application to study. The shortest period in which any pupil has completed the course is one year; while one member of the last graduating class occupied three years, and another three years and a half; in neither instance was the pupil deficient in a certain kind of acquired knowledge on entering the school, but in subsequent examinations, failed to give evidence of proper qualifications for teaching. Both were possessed of sufficient positive attainments, but were deficient in ability to communicate their knowledge to others.

The more the subject occupies my attention, the stronger is my conviction, that unless specially trained in the art of teaching, even well instructed minds are but little more likely to arrive at the best methods of imparting what they know, because of their superior intelligence, than those of less knowledge. I would not confine teachers to particular processes, but would have them made familiar with the best methods, before attempting to give instruction; and if trained themselves to originality of thought, each would be able to modify the methods she had learned, or adopt her own, and readily adapt them to the peculiarities of her pupils.

SCHOOLS OF PRACTICE.

These Schools vary so little in their general condition and mode of operation from the very full description given in my last annual report, as to render it unnecessary to enter into a detailed account at the present time. The Principals manage their respective charges, in a manner productive of great advantage to the pupil-teachers, in acquiring practice in teaching and tact in discipline; while they secure to the scholars of these schools, such advantages as are not obtained in schools taught altogether by permanent teachers.

The pupils of the Normal School enter the schools of practice as teachers, at the end of the first term, and the course of practice continues at intervals during the remainder of their pupilage; affording to the pupil-teacher experience in teaching classes of every grade, from those learning the Alphabet to the highest class in the Grammar School. The system of instruction adopted in these schools, secures to the pupils a degree of intelligence highly satisfactory. The lessons are not arbitrarily divided into distinct branches, kept strictly separate as in elementary schools generally, but are connected as far as practicable, so as to keep all the subjects taught, before the mind of the pupil; affording constant opportunity for review, without tiring with monotony of recitations. Thus, a recitation in geography, at the same time becomes a review of history and incidentally of grammar, arithmetic &c.—through the whole circle of the branches taught in the schools.

The first essays of the pupil-teacher are made under the close supervision of the Principal of the school; but in her subsequent efforts she is left more to herself; affording her opportunity for comparing the theoretical principles which have been inculcated by lectures, with the results of her own observations; thus calling forth her mental powers, awakening thought, impressing her with the responsibility of her calling, and perfecting her in the highest qualification of her art;—that of adapting her instruction to all capacities.

DISCIPLINE.

The kind feelings manifested by the pupils towards each other, and the marked affection so generally exhibited for their teachers, have to a great extent removed all necessity for any other restraining influences. There seems to exist in the school a moral power exerting itself so generally, that although it does not check all, it limits the tendency to evil doing to comparatively few cases. The pupils of the Normal School, being candidates for the Teacher's office, the ends at which they aim, would not be half accomplished, if in their preparatory training they did not realize by their own experience, that to govern or be governed properly, the affections must be rightly directed and improved. The discipline is therefore left in a great measure to the pupils themselves; thus habituated to self-restraint, they become possessed of the most important qualification in the government of others.

APPOINTMENT OF PUPILS TO SITUATIONS.

The number of pupils appointed to situations since the last report has been much greater than during any similar period in the history of the school.

Of these appointments, several have been made to situations in Grammar schools; embracing every grade, from first to fourth assistant. These selections have mostly been made in reference to the evidences of scholarship and ability to impart instruction, afforded by the records of the Normal School;—in which cases the expectations of those conferring the appointments have been fully realized.

I have before adverted to the want of uniformity in the mode of selecting teachers from the school, and suggested that its usefulness would be increased, and the objects of its establishment better promoted, if the tests of ability were not as at present, so much confined to evidences of mere scholarship.

As the exclusive control of the appointment of teachers is vested in the Sectional Boards, it is their province to judge of the qualifications of those whom they employ, as well as of what constitutes sufficient evidence of their fitness for situations as teachers. With the view therefore, to meet all the necessary conditions, and afford evidence satisfactory to those having the power to appoint candidates to situations, the semi-annual examinations of the Normal School, might be conducted by a committee composed of one or more Directors appointed by each Sectional Board, in conjunction with the Committee on the Normal School,—the examining committee being empowered to confer upon worthy pupils of sufficient age three grades of certificates, according to their respective qualifications; making the holders eligible to election to the situations of first, second or third assistants in Grammar Schools.

ATTENDANCE.

The average daily attendance, including every day the school was in session during the year, was more than ninety-five per cent.; the time of daily attendance was five hours and a half, and the number of recitations daily, five; besides the Exercises in Drawing, Vocal Music, Penmanship, Practice in Teaching, and attendance on Lectures.

EXAMINATIONS.

The regular written examinations required by the regulations of the school, have been made, with satisfactory evidences of improvement. The subjects examined upon embrace the regular branches in which instruction has been given during each term, and the results generally are such as furnish gratifying proof of thoroughness on the part of the pupils, and indicate an amount of intelligence in the school most encouraging to the teachers.

TEACHERS.

The teachers continue to labor successfully in promoting the interests of the school, and enjoy in an eminent degree the esteem and confidence of the pupils. The instruction and recitations, exhibit an earnestness and determination of purpose characteristic of efficient teaching. The enlightened zeal and thoroughness with which the teachers do their work, elicit the commendation of all who witness the exercises of the school.

I have thus briefly presented such statements, as I deem sufficient to enable you to form correct conclusions, in reference to the condition of the school

Every term seems to afford additional evidence that the school is quietly and without ostentation working its way to popular favor. While much interest on the part of citizens and strangers is manifested by the frequency of their visits, I regret that more persons do not make themselves acquainted with it by actual observation. It seems but necessary to become familiar with the practical character of the school to be convinced of its usefulness; and the necessity of an institution affording ample means for teachers to learn their duties, before attempting to perform them.

Respectfully,

A. T. W. WRIGHT,

Principal.
